

Believed to be the descendant of the Thai breed known as Thong Daeng, the modern Burmese cat is a delightful feline whose foreign body type distinguishes it from other pure-bred cats as does the breed's traditional brown coloration. Although the breed is recognized by some organizations in as many as ten colours, the traditional brown or sable is the most commonly associated with this appealing cat. In the fancy, the Burmese is treasured for its enduring charm, intelligence, high level of activity and unabashed affection towards its owner. The Burmese owner will welcome the advice from noted cat authority Dennis Kelsey-Wood about the proper care, training and health of the Burmese cat. The author provides a revealing chapter on the breed's origins and its growing popularity in Europe, a description of the Burmese's physical characteristics and personality and sensible discussions about selecting a kitten, maintenance, breeding and exhibiting. Mr Kelsey-Wood's text is enhanced by the accompanying colour photography, both enlivening the chapters and illustrating vital points about the breed. In all, this book presents over 100 colour photographs and illustrations, including some never-before-seen scanning electron micrograph images produced exclusively for this series. As attractive as it is informative, this book also addresses the health concerns of every Burmese owner, including a special section about feline eye problems, with reliable advice about safety in the home, selecting a veterinary surgeon, coat problems and effective parasite control. Topics discussed include: History of the Burmese Cat; A portrait of the Burmese Cat; Purchasing a Burmese Cat; Providing a safe home for your Burmese Cat; Feeding your Burmese Cat; Grooming your Burmese Cat; Training and behaviour of your Burmese Cat; Breeding your Burmese Cat; Exhibiting your Burmese Cat; Health care of your Burmese
